

CITY'S TRYSTING PLACES NOT SECLUDED NOWADAYS

New York Times (1923-Current file); Sep 21, 1924;

ProQuest Historical Newspapers: The New York Times (1851-2009)

pg. XX2

CITY'S TRYSTING PLACES NOT SECLUDED NOWADAYS

TRYSTING places in New York today are not so secluded as they were when the city was quaint New Amsterdam and when Maiden Lane, tree-shaded and pastoral, was the favorite meeting spot for tender couples. Today the trysting places best liked are extremely public.

One of these is the southeast corner of Broadway and Forty-third Street, in Times Square. It is especially popular on Saturday afternoons, just before the matinee hour, and damsels waiting there for swains may be counted by the hundreds.

A similar spot is at Broadway and Thirty-fourth Street, and there is another at Broadway and Fiftieth. They are not characterized by privacy. In fact, the bashful youth in search of his fair one must use football tactics to reach her side. And then he does not take her gently by the hand but firmly grasps her arm and proceeds to fight his way by main strength out of the crowd.