TWO IN AMBULANCE TOO MANY.: Intrusion Restores Patient Whose Illness Startled Car P. New York Times (1857-1922): Jan 28, 1900: ProOuest Historical Newspapers: The New York Times (1851-2009)

the ambulance.

surgeon ordered.

he walked away.

pg. 15 TWO IN AMBULANCE TOO MANY. ambulance. In the process his hat fell across the other's face. The first patient.

Intrusion Restores Patient Whose Illness Startled Car Passengers.

A Broadway cable car had bumped its way down to a point opposite Barclay Street vesterday morning when, amid the startled exclamations of women a tall. lank young man slipped from his seat to the floor. His eyes rolled and froth lined his line. The car stopped, blocking those behind, while all hands aboard held a consultation. A policeman and the conductor carried the convulsed, trembling yaung man toward the Post Office, just outside of which a Hudson Street Hospital ambulance was standing. As they carefully pushed him in the Post Office doors opened. Four policemen came out carrying a man apparently unconscious. He, too, was placed in the tient to the hospital, where an examina-tion convinced him that the man was intoxicated. He was turned over to the police of the City Hall Station, able to talk. He described himself as Alfred J. Hutton, a printer, of 1.338 Third Avenue. New Post Office for Long Island City.

startled at this intrusion upon his privacy, sat up suddenly. Then he crawled out of

"You get back there; you're ill," the

"No: I'm all right," the other replied, as

Surgeon Sherrill took his remaining pa-

Contracts have been made for a new Post Office for Long Island City. The building will be put up as a private enterprise, and the ground floor will be leased by the Government. It will be located at 57 Jackson Avenue Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.